Comments: I am appalled that the DOE seems to be determined to go through with this project regardless of the many, many citizens so strongly opposed to it.

Not only am I concerned for Nevada, but all the states across the country this waste will be transported through. Where is there a safe place anymore? How can people travel across this beautiful United States without fearing what the semi's around them might be carrying?

Let each state that has nuclear power find ways to store their own wastes.

Consider the area in Texas that President Clinton said was more remote and a better alternative. Then again, maybe President Bush doesn't care to have it in his backyard?

Please listen to the people of Nevada and the Native Americans here that you have turned a deaf ear to.

We don't want that nuclear waste at Yucca Mountain. Period.
